The role of Social Capital in the Longevity of Older Mexican Americans: Findings from the Hispanic Established Populations for the Epidemiologic Studies of the Elderly (HisP-ED). We examine the role of social capital and health among older Mexican Americans. Social capital is defined as opportunities for mutual support and trust in one's social environment. Social capital has been related to health at the individual level, but relatively little is known about the role of social capital at the ecological level. We use data from a subset of the Hispanic Established Populations for the Epidemiologic Studies of the Elderly (HisP-ED), a multiracial/ethnic cohort of older Mexican Americans. We estimated multiple imputation for the 2618 participants in the study sample. Overall, the median age of the participants was 81 years. The
