Witchaven is a free 2D side-scrolling fantasy action game, primarily made for the Amiga CD32 and published by a division of the Swedish Software Group, Amiga Force. The game was released on the 23rd January 1994 to generally mixed reviews and overall underperformed upon release, despite having a professional game design. The game received numerous sales through use of the multi-platform Amiga CD32. Amiga Format magazine retrospectively awarded Witchaven a Total Game of the Year award, and called it "an Amiga classic", despite its underperformance. Creator Comments: "In 1996 I set out to bring the then-rebellious Amiga back into the public arena with a game that was simple, something to be played by everyone. And that's what I think Witchaven was!" – Björn Frykman (Björnstö-Frykman) is a game developer, designer and game designer from Örnsköldsvik in Sweden. He is now the creative director of Abstrakt Software, the company behind the new game Star Ranger. Overall Comments: "Witchaven is undoubtedly the best Amiga CD32 game. It contains all the elements that made other games of the genre (like Doom) popular, but it does so with more intelligence and realism, mainly because of the fact that it is actually a game about death! I really loved Witchaven, but only a few people did, because of its controversial content. It's hard to see what's the appeal of a dungeon with pitch-black walls, and it takes a while to get to the big bosses." – Amiga Format About Amiga Format About Amiga Format About Amiga Format Magazine established on October 2nd 1990. It covers news about the Amiga computer games industry, and was published by The Official Amiga Format Magazine Limited. The magazine sold in excess of two million copies during its nine-year run. Creator Comments: "When you play a game for the first time and the suspense is not over, it's the experience that remains in your memory." – Björnstö-Frykman About Björnstö-Frykman is the

The different minigames are built on a very simple game mechanic, which resembles the game "Tetris". When player presses a button, the character will always be in constant motion unless he/she is in an "endless" loop. What makes this game different is that the character will bounce between the four directions when he/she collides with a wall. If the player is constantly in motion, while his/her character is colliding with a wall, he/she will run into the wall a lot. This brings all of the possibilities of "endless" loops. Light Apprentice Game: The gameplay is not that exciting as the "Tetris" game. All of the game's mechanics are used to make mini-game sequences of a darker, horror-like atmosphere. To your character, the world around him/her will look like a regular room with all the objects in a closed position. Light Apprentice is set up with four rooms: The first room is the arena (which contains your character), the second room is where you must defeat two enemy knights at once, the third room is where you must defeat the knight and his sentinel at once, and the fourth room is where you must defeat the game is to survive. Surgical points of the minigame is to survive. Your character (the game is to survive. Your character (the main character) is trapped in a dark fantasy world. The game is to survive. You must collect balls of light in order to survive. Your must collect yellow balls of light in order to survive. *Game Over: Your character is trapped in a mansion where the owner died after playing a "game". Your goal is to find the hidden key which will release your character. *Stuff Gets Serious: A bunch of bricks that give light shine
