* Photoshop Elements is a cheaper, easier-to-use version of Photoshop. It's designed for people who don't need all the power of Photoshop, such as those who create graphics for the Web, print, or other forms of publication. * Photoshop Creative Suite is designed for people who want to learn all the features of Photoshop, develop their skills, and create high-end work. * Photoshop CS6 is the newest version of the flagship Photoshop program. The latest version has new capabilities including better performance and full support for 64-bit color management, as well as enhancements to Adobe Bridge and Smart Objects. * Photoshop Creative Cloud, a monthly subscription service, gives you access to all of the applications in the Creative Suite, including Photoshop. Photoshop's capabilities are vast. Be aware that as your skills develop, you will learn which tools you can use and which you don't have, but you will probably not recognize those limits until you start trying to use them. That's why Photoshop is such a powerful tool: It's easy to learn, and you'll really get a feel for its capabilities when you use it.

The Sydney Blasters have a win streak, the New York Cosmos have a win streak. The Montreal Impact have one. So does Sporting Kansas City. But none of them, according to the USSF Division 2 rankings, are more likely to win than the Vancouver Whitecaps. So far this year, the Caps have gone 5-3-0 with a +4 goal difference, while Whitecaps FC currently rank sixth in the league with a +2 goal differential. Sound familiar? There are only four other Canadian teams currently ranked in the top 25, including two of them (TFC and Toronto) at the bottom end of that list, with Ottawa playing catch-up in 12th. Whitecaps fans have reason to worry. "We haven't shown up," Whitecaps head coach Carl Robinson told reporters after practice on Monday. "We did well at times and on some levels we did okay... but it's gone backwards. And it's sad." Robinson points to the team's defensive lapses as a major reason. In the win over the Timbers, Whitecaps keeper Mark Pais spent the first-half in a neutral area because he had no idea who the attacker was on a breakaway. "He literally put his hands up and said, 'I'm not touching that,'" Robinson said. "I said, 'Look, it's our players and we're playing this way' and he said, 'I'm the keeper.' So it's what he is today. He plays like it. That's what the gaffer has to do. It's a learning experience." There's no hiding the fact that the Caps desperately need to improve their defence – they have conceded 20 goals in 12 games this year, scoring only 14. When Robinson was appointed in February, he promised to make his team better from the back, and the team's new-look back four has yet to show up in the numbers. This week, Marcel de Jong and Pais have had to rotate because of injuries, though Pais has looked good when he's been a regular starter. Among the reasons the back line has yet to perform are the Caps' tendency to put their fullbacks under pressure on counter-attacks. "What happens too often is that the fullbacks seem to be caught out so we want to help them out with defence," Robinson said. "Sometimes we're caught out and sometimes our goal-scorers are caught out as well. It
