Q: How to increase the surface size of an iPad UIView created using Auto Layout I have an iPad app that has a ViewController with a UIView on the first screen that is designed using Autolayout in Xcode. The View Controller is just a container for the UIView. The problem is that the UIView has a maximum size of only 320 x 464 even though the UIView has autolayout constraints to maintain its original size. It is similar to the auto layout issue with iPhone screens. I have looked at adding the UIView as a subview of another view that has a larger size but the width and height constraints don't seem to apply when I set the size of the larger view (it's always at 0 height and width). I want to increase the size of the UIView so that I can display a map on the entire screen and allow more real estate for scrolling. Thanks A: Add a width constraint to your view equal to the width of your view. Let us help you find the right help for your business needs. The larger firms have trained their managers to understand the field of digital marketing as it is becoming more sophisticated with advances in technology. The problem is that not all digital marketing agencies have the skill and experience to handle a large number of clients. They often do not have the size to handle each client as well as they should. There are also not that many marketing firms that specialize in
