Pentagon building II The Pentagon building II is a skyscraper in the U.S. capital of Washington, D.C.. It is the second building on that site; the first, the Pentagon Building, was demolished in 1967. A total of 725 people died in the 1993 bombing of the World Trade Center towers 1–2. The building is located on Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, in the middle of a park known as the Ellipse, at the edge of Washington's Chinatown neighborhood. History The building was authorized under Act of Congress on May 11, 1947, to the Office of the Architect of the United States Department of the Interior to provide temporary quarters for the Senate and the House of Representatives, along with offices for the Senate Office Buildings. The then-Congressional Wing of the Pentagon Building was designed by the Office of the Supervising Architect under the jurisdiction of James A. Wetmore, from a preliminary design prepared by the Office of the Supervising Architect under James A. Wetmore. The then-House Office Building was designed by Charles A. Coolidge, also from a preliminary design prepared by the Office of the Supervising Architect under James A. Wetmore. Construction of the building was completed in 1949. A cover in concrete 1/4-inch thick covered the steelreinforced basement and floors 4, 5, 6, and 7. Additional steel reinforcement was installed in the columns and beams that bound the building. Between February 14, 1951, and February 12, 1952, a new Senate Office Building was built to the east of the Pentagon Building. The new Senate Office Building, as originally envisioned, was taller than the Pentagon Building, with a skybridge connecting the two buildings. After the $35,000,000 Pentagon Building was completed in 1950, the Senate Office Building fell through and was never built as originally designed. In the late 1970s, the building was closed. The building sat vacant until 1985 when the United States Congress authorized the conversion of the building into office space. In 1986, the building was sold to real estate developer Robert F. Stoops and his partner, Andrew Stoops. The three-story annex of the building was torn down and replaced by an additional office building. Redevelopment In 2003 the building
