, i.e. seconds. The wind turbine system now also has a built in energy generation meter as the wind generation value. This value is integrated with the standard turbine system value for all power output calculations on the system, but can also be checked separately. The wind turbine system values are now also displayed in the turbine data report. In new systems, the display options of the wind turbine system value can be configured in the System tab of the setup page. The display is now always in percentage and displayed in a smaller font than the turbine data. Creating a new location for the wind turbine system and assigning the wind turbine system values to this location The location for the wind turbine system can now be changed in the location overview screen. This allows for new locations with a desired name in any existing group. Wind turbine system as source of water heating The FAN efficiency value is now also taken into account for the calculation of the water heating value. The wind turbine system can now also be used for water heating. In this case the heat storage capacity of the system is usually increased. Internal settings The wind turbine system can now have all of its service runs which are predefined. Smart service runs The wind turbine system now includes predefined sets of service runs which can be set by the wind turbine system itself. Internal settings of the parameters in the wind turbine system The wind turbine system can now include custom values for the parameters in the turbine data spreadsheet. The parameters are configured in the System tab of the setup page. Wind generator system and electricity market Service runs The wind turbine system can now generate service runs for the wind turbine and the wind generator, with which the system can be synchronized to the electricity market. Incoming power data The wind turbine system can now calculate power consumption data from the incoming power meter in the wind turbine system. Battery power consumption The wind turbine system can now also detect and calculate the power consumption of the battery charger in the wind turbine system. He was a pioneer of the European skier and the first to win three World Championships in the same alpine discipline and the best of his generation. A comparison with fellow Norwegians Einar Einarson and Olaf Frei shows that it is not necessarily the most successful that make the list. Mario Lunelli was born on 24 March 1958 in Nice, France and took up skiing at the young age of six. He won the giant slalom at the 1980 Olympics in Lake Placid and was the first European male skier to win the World Championships in 1979 in Seefeld. In 1988, he won the overall World Cup title and also won the World Cup again in 1991 and 1992. The 1992 Olympics in Albertville in France were marked by Mario Lunelli's refusal to give the "kiss of peace" to the International Olympic Committee President, Juan Antonio Samaranch. "I accepted the Swiss flag and then chose to give the kiss of peace to the Chairman of the Olympic Committee," Lunelli told the press shortly before the games. "This ceremony is a fundamental part of an Olympic Games." Lunelli set the Italian world record in the slalom in 1991 and 1992 and was runner-up at the World Championships in the same alpine discipline in 1986 and 1988. He was considered to be the most complete allround alpine skier of all time and the best in the "liberation" movement. This meant he would often be overtaken by younger and more prolific skiers in this movement. His elder brother Maurizio Lunelli became a successful runner. In April 2000, Lunelli and his twin brother, Marco, took a plane from Nice to Oslo, Norway to attend the third meeting of the World Allround Skiing Committee in Oslo. The brothers, who have been friends since childhood, were ordered to appear at the airport in handcuffs. The very existence of the committee had been revealed, the Italian was said to have been slapped in the face and told to keep his mouth shut and call himself a skier not a committee member. Lunelli became a member of the IOC after the 1992 Olympic Games. In 1994, he participated in the World Cup in Switzerland and won the World Cup that year. The following year, Lunelli was knighted at Queen Margrethe II's investiture at the Norwegian parliament.
