An unfinished painting signed and dedicated to Anselme Jappe that shows the artist's experiment with perspective. The painting depicts the windows of his birthplace of the 16th arrondissement of Paris. Anselm Jappe was born into a family of artists in the "bastard artist" tradition. His grandfather, Balthus, was a noted illustrator of the Thirties, also creating tapestries. His father, Maxime, was a gifted draughtsman and sculptor who taught him the craft of both watercolors and oils. Like his father, Jappe pursued art and became a respected figure in the Paris art world. More than 100 of his paintings hang in private and public collections in France and abroad. Among his most prestigious admirers was the Impressionist painter Chaim Soutine, who had a close and lasting friendship with the artist. Starting in the 1940s, Jappe began exploring his interest in perspective, which had remained a mystery since the Renaissance. He experimented using both monochromatic tones and colors. In the course of those experiments, the artist developed an obscure and unique style of rendering objects, which is not present in traditional perspective. Density of electrocardiographic left ventricular hypertrophy is an independent predictor of cardiovascular morbidity and mortality in hypertensive blacks and whites: the Jackson Heart Study. The objectives of this study were to evaluate the associations between the use of electrocardiographic left ventricular hypertrophy (ECG LVH) criteria and cardiovascular events in black and white patients with untreated essential hypertension and to determine whether the associations differ by race. The JHS is a population-based, prospective, observational follow-up study. Hypertensive participants (n=2996) were evaluated at baseline (1996-2001). ECG LVH was defined as left ventricular (LV) mass index ≥ 94 g/m² in men and ≥ 72 g/m² in women. ECG LVH was detected in 2824 (96%) black and 360 (11%) white participants. After adjusting for age, sex, the use of antihypertensive medication, and the presence of diabetes, peripheral arterial disease, or congestive heart failure, both ECG and echocardiographic LVH were associated with a significantly higher risk of cardiovascular morbidity and mortality, regardless of race. ECG LVH had a better predictive performance for cardiovascular morbidity (event rate [ER]: 13.4% in ECG LVH vs. 10.2% without; p=0.001) and mortality (ER: 2.8% vs. 1.7%; p=0.003) than echocardiographic LVH in both blacks and whites. However, in blacks, ECG LVH showed better sensitivity and greater positive and negative predictive values for cardiovascular morbidity and mortality than echocardiographic LVH but not in whites. These data demonstrated that ECG LVH was associated with
