S&W 40-3Date of Manufacture Smith and Wesson. Q: Turn off "find and replace" tab for libreoffice? I'm using Gedit's "Find and replace" feature to find and replace a common text in many, many documents. When I do this, it opens up the LibreOffice "Find and replace" tab. The "Find and replace" tab looks weird and is unusable. I would like to know if there is a simple way to turn off this "Find and replace" tab, so I can use Gedit's "Find and replace" feature on these documents without LibreOffice's "find and replace" feature displaying? Here's a screenshot of the LibreOffice "Find and replace" window: A: You can kill that "find & replace" tab. Create a script in a text editor that sets the application launch parameter: //set LibreOffice launch parameter import os.environ["libreoffice.so"]="headless" Save the file under ~/.local/bin/open-libreoffice-launcher.sh Then chmod +x ~/.local/bin/open-libreoffice-launcher.sh and the set a shortcut. Open a terminal and set the path: cd /home/yourusername/.local/bin ln -s open-libreoffice-launcher.sh Run the script: $ ~/.local/bin/open-libreoffice-launcher.sh Now the launcher won't show up under the icon bar and you can get back to gedit's "find & replace". If you just want to turn off this tab permanently, then see the accepted answer for this similar question. :". %s" ", XBSnapshotStr(snapshot)); } else { char message[2048]; snprintf(message, sizeof(message), "Unable to find snapshot \"%s\"", d0c515b9f4
