If you don't trust booters, Dt 1 V Drums Tutor Software.") } The problem comes when you also map some attributes to Spring Boot fields. This is done by the following annotation: @Getter @Getter @Setter private @JsonIgnore User user; The problem is that you don't have a user field in the UserDTO. But, since it's annotated with @Getter and @Setter, it ends up looking like a field. Even worse, it ends up being serialized in the JSON response! How do we fix it? There's no easy way to solve it. The only work-around is to map only fields (with @Fields) you want to be in the UserDTO. This example shows the last solution. It requires us to have a FieldUser class that won't be serialized (like, an empty User class). You can also use @JsonIdentityInfo("id") and @JsonIdentityReference(alwaysAsId = true) to serialize this particular class. This is done in the following way: @Entity @Id @JsonIdentityInfo("id") @JsonIdentityReference(alwaysAsId = true) @Table(name = "user") public class User { private String id; private String name; private String email; private String password;... @OneToOne(optional = false, cascade = { CascadeType.PERSIST, CascadeType.MERGE }) @JsonBackReference public U getBackRef(Class cls); } It requires a public getBackRef method (on the UserDTO). This method must have a User return type and it needs to invoke the javax.persistence.CascadeType.PERSIST or javax.persistence.CascadeType.MERGE (depending on the return type of getBackRef ). You can also use 6d1f23a050
