Specifically, umbilical cord blood cells are being collected at the time of birth and the mononuclear cell fraction is selected for use in studies as adults with various therapeutic indications. Characterization studies are carried out to determine if the stem cells demonstrate stem cell characteristics consistent with the original cells of the umbilical cord. In addition, cultures of amniotic fluid cells are established for the selection and characterization of the stem cells of amniotic fluid. In both cases the cells are established in long-term culture and provided for transfusion after depletion of T lymphocytes and most other cells.Q: How do you send a variable to a Javascript variable with a link?
