ok, i would like to activate the product on my dell 4010c. but i have to pay for this, and there is no way that i can pay for the product, i have submitted for the microsoft intuit tax free refund program. i already receive a refund from them that i put into my debit card. anyhow, i only have my standalone license which is serialized. i guess i can use that serialized license to activate the product. so, is there a way to activate the product from the standalone license without activating the product on my dell desktop?? i don't have any exclusive key anymore since i disposed the card where i redeemed my intuit tax free refund, and now i have no way to activate the product. the registration page always ask me to pay either the annual renewal or a full autocad 2008 activation. i have no way to activate the product from my standalone license. help me please. i can pay for activation if it's an annual or full activation. hello, i got another question. can i get a new activation from an old license? i mean i can activate the product using the serial key i got from a legal activator. of course i can't use that activator serial key anymore but the old license i got from microsoft's tax free scheme is still valid. can i use that to activate the product? if no, any suggestions on how to do that? i really want to use altium designer in my design. please help me, bye, zheng since the original version of autocad had a limited number of cpu capability on which to run in the days when a lot of work could be done in windows, the later versions took advantage of multiple cpus.

FULL AutoCAD 2008 Activation

while there were several variations on the idea of an autocad It, the reality was that autocad It and autocad are identical except the license. the subscription fee was $600 for users of autocad It. for autocad, the price is about $1,000 per year. when i started to use autocad to draw, i was learning how to learn. i had to go to ms-ddb to search for tutorials and figure out how to get started. i would go to the "help" and "manual" and the "tutorials". i learned a lot. navigate the command line with full-screen help. type /help and you will see a help file with a full list of commands, their syntax and usage, and other tips and tricks. you can also use the online help center to open the search box and immediately jump to what you are looking for. see also the command help pages, available in the browser from your autocad software. autocad 2009 provides a full set of orthographic views, including standard, cross-section, and sectional views. the views can be configured to appear automatically when the project is opened or can be configured as a series of steps to be taken before opening the project. in addition, the user can save a set of views as a template and use them repeatedly. autocad 2009 also features a new workflow, including the possibility of auto-sorting and auto-grouping. this new workflow helps to improve user productivity and decreases the time needed to create a project. the new workflow also includes a new active-record feature that allows the user to type quickly, efficiently, and correctly, even when working with multiple objects. 5ec8ef588b
