In order to greet our Dear Customers with upcoming holidays we .Q: Passing matrix data between two QThreads I would like to create two threads in Qt that both display data from one matrix. The thread that creates the matrix is called Quantized(thread_model). The thread that displays the matrix is called QuantizeDisplay(thread_display). Currently, the Qt documentation shows how to pass matrices between threads within the same process (using Queues) but not across processes. I have been able to successfully pass data between two different threads by making one thread write to a shared memory, and having the other thread read from the same shared memory (data written by thread is displayed). The shared memory is a single int[] matrix (IntegerMatrix). I am able to pass the matrix data successfully from Quantized to QuantizeDisplay, but when QuantizeDisplay gets to the matrix data it refuses to display (and instead displays a black screen). I think the error is being caused by trying to access the matrix data from the wrong thread. If I change the parameter passed in threads from mat to IntegerMatrix * IntegerMatrix, I get the same black screen for QuantizeDisplay (I would have thought the two threads were accessing the same matrix since they were both running the same code). Since IntegerMatrix is an int[][] and IntegerMatrix * IntegerMatrix is also an int[][]], it seems weird that mat and IntegerMatrix * IntegerMatrix would both work, but IntegerMatrix * IntegerMatrix wouldn't. Since they are both arrays of ints, I don't understand why IntMatrix * IntMatrix would behave differently than IntMatrix * IntegerMatrix. Below is the code that is working and where I think I am causing the error. //class file:
IntegerMatrix * quantized; //class header file class Quantized : public QThread { ...
private: IntegerMatrix* quantized; }; class QuantizeDisplay : public QThread { ...
private: IntegerMatrix 79a2804d6b
