Life He was born in Liverpool in 1770, and was educated at Harrow School. He was admitted a student of the Royal Academy on 30 May 1789. He moved to London in 1793. He set up as an engraver and published many of his own works and those of other artists. Among his most famous subjects was Prince William IV, engraved by Thomas Lawrence in 1811, which is considered a masterpiece of English portraiture. He also published many portraits by Thomas Lawrence, and his wife Mary Croft. He was known as "The Spy of King George IV". He died in Fleet Street in 1833. Works Matthew also published a very popular comic poem, The Genius of Beauty, in 1797. His illustrations were published for a number of periodicals including the Dublin Magazine, the Graphic, the Quarterly Review, the Edinburgh Review, The Gentleman's Magazine and the Magazine of Fashion. He engraved in the style of Joseph Duplessis a portrait of Lord Byron, in the collection of the British Museum. Among his other portraits are John Keats, Lord Byron, Robert Southey, and the English landscape artist, Joseph Wright of Derby. His most famous and distinctive engraving was the portrait of Lord Byron (1811), for which he was awarded the RA's highest honour, a'medal with a suitable inscription'. He also engraved several watercolours of Cornwall by Richard Polwhele, which are in the collection of the National Trust.
