What's New In ISOXpress 9001 Light?

ISO-9001 is the standard for organizations that want to control and be accountable for their quality systems. This standard is recognized throughout the world and many countries have implemented the standards as official regulations for companies. Each module of the software program provides you with the functions that are necessary to fill in and to create new forms, templates, and documents. The program can be operated through a user-friendly interface with a bar at the top of the screen that enables you to access each module. Each module is organized in such a way that it's not difficult to navigate and the controls are intuitive. The program interface can be fully customized. The documents created with the program are stored in the database. The documents have the structure that they are expected by the ISO-9001 standard and the document structure is compatible with the standard. The program provides your organization with the documentation that you are required to have in order to be compliant to the standard. The program also creates a single file of your documents, which you can use to be compliant to the standard. You can also export your forms, documents, and templates into PDF format to share them easily with your colleagues and suppliers. The program is intended to be used by organizations with ISO-9001 system certification. The program is not intended to be used by organizations that don't have certification. Furthermore, the program is designed with the standard in mind, so the program is compatible with the standard. For example, in the 'System of Records' module, you can add your own user name and password to get access to your data. The documents created with the program have the same structure as the standard and the document structure is not difficult to follow.
