Stream A Very Harold & Kumar 3D Christmas (HBO) on HBO Max. The holidays get an irreverent dose of stoner laughs and screwball fun, Harold & Kumar-style. .Q: Bypass m.toObject() error I have a webview in my react native android project. When the page loads I want to load some information from the API. My problem is, when I try to load this data in the webview I get an error { errorCode: 400, data: [ ], status: 400 } because its giving back [ ] from the API. I want to bypass this error. I only want to show the [ ] on the screen when an error occurs. I tried to put a invisible spinner in the webview but thats not working, it just leaves a black screen when the error occurs.

webView.setWebViewClient(new WebViewClient() { @Override public void onReceivedError(WebView view, WebResourceRequest request, WebResourceError error){ Toast.makeText(context, "Error"+request.toString(), Toast.LENGTH_LONG).show(); loading.setVisibility(View.GONE); //hide loading } }); A: You can use this error listener webView.setWebViewClient(new WebViewClient() { @Override public void onReceivedError(WebView view, WebResourceRequest request, WebResourceError error){ if (error.getErrorCode() == ErrorCode.API_NOT_SUPPORTED) { //do your stuff
